

It is puzzling to me how the proposed increase in levels of fishing activity in the national marine parks can be considered consistent with long-term protection of our marine resources. It appears that the current government allocates more weight to short-term commercial interests than scientific evidence for long-term sustainability. Disappointing.

Peter Johnson