With the current zoning of the coral sea I believe it needs to be protected from persein fishing and super trawlers the current fishery has been in place for many year and long before the GBRMPA was even established and has been managed very well. The current commercial long line fishery is a much more sustainable fishery ( if the fish arnt hungry they do t feed or get caught a persein fishing vessel catches all the fish and diminishes the total fish stock and breeding cycle in one swoop.

The marlin fleet is a predominantly catch and release fishery and should have full access to the coral sea for catch and release purpose. Or pending world records.

The worst thing we can do as a society is allow super trawling and persein netting.
