

The proposed removal of marine parks is an unprecedented move, when Australia has some incredibly unique, beautiful and important animals and marine ecosystems that deserve greater, not less protection. Tourism and existing fishers rely on the health of these waters. We are seeing so many fisheries in a state of exhaustion and collapse around the world, and the value of Australia's marine environment and the importance of these parks couldn't be higher.