

I don't like this.

why is the energy minister the same as the environment minister?

Don't you think the energy minister should butt heads with the environment minister, because the two jobs are mutually conflicting and require negotiation.

I guess you either embrace the future, and all the possibilities, in a world that is moving so, so, fast, or you stamp it out, and you kill everything - all the wildlife, the oceans, the food chain.

Over fishing is hurting everything, and there not going to stop, because overpopulation is our future, and no many people can keeps their hands out of the cookie jar.

The illegal fishers won't keep their hand out of the cookie jar, because they need to eat and make a living.

And the government can't seem to keep your hand out of the cookie jar because of whatever short sighted economic boost or bribe that your getting, to commit this atrocity.

There is the individual and then there is the flood gate. Don't forget that.

That goes for projects as well as people. You open the floodgates on the environment and soon there is nothing left.

Just like giving Adani an unlimited water license in Queensland that hurts farmers, and tree clearing laws, and letting developers run rampant. Maybe the floodgates are already open.

Thanks for your time,

Kristi