

Dear Sir/Madam,

Please do not give away any portion of our existing protected reefs! They are our precious heritage. Our planet cannot afford to destroy or misuse these precious assets. I am prepared to back my plea with fundraising money and I ask you to look to like-minded people to join in a sensible conversation that attempts to investigate and come to realistic compromises. I caught my first fish when I was 3yrs of age. Today I am an avid, but conservation-minded angler. The majority of fish I catch, I return to the water. On a dedicated fishing trip, I will kill one fish per day...and then only if large enough to leave space for the younger fish on the way up. If we “love” our planet, we need to cherish its resources. Your task is panning: thus you represent the hope for the maintenance of the gift that is our planet.

We need a genuine conversation about this, and I should be more than glad to contribute to it, with both time and $. I do sincerely hope that you and others can join in a considered and realistic debate. I look forward to your reply,

Best Wishes,

Reverend Jane Chapman
