Does your comment relate to the renaming of marine parks? No Please type your comments below:
Worldwide fish stocks are being depleted.

Within Australia we have seen massive bleaching events on our reefs.

The oceans need time to recover from the destruction that humans have caused.

It shocks me that an Australian government agency would even consider removal or reduction in marine areas being protected. In doing so, the Department is ignoring decades of research and science, to the detriment of future generations.

I do not support any move by the department to reduce the size of the marine parks or the protection level accorded to them.

I support increasing the areas under protection and reducing all commercial activity in the marine parks.
