

To whom it may concern,

I strongly object and disagree with the government deciding to wind back the protections for our Marine National Parks.

Our oceans are already being overfished with certain species of fish stocks collapsing worldwide, the global climate is changing and under stress.

When is our government going to start listening to the people? It is quite shocking to see the proposal's being put forward. The Great Barrier Reef has just experienced the largest bleaching event ever in recorded history and now you want to reduce what little protections are there?

For once will this government do something that is right!
