

I am very concerned about the proposal to change marine sanctuaries. As a scuba diver I have seen the changes over the last 20 years which are dramatic not only with coral reefs but fish quantities.

I regularly go to the Philippines diving because they are protecting many their reefs and expanding their reserved areas every year. Australia is called a first world country but is acting like a poor third world country because of this we are losing a lot of tourist business because they are going to a country like the Philippines with better values.

James Wright

PADI dive master.