

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I strongly object to the government's proposed reduction to marine conservation areas. We need to preserve our marine environment to allow a resurgence in fish stocks, to preserve other marine life that may prove important to our future, such as sea weed, and to conserve the environment for future generations.

It is my belief that posterity will regard the global governments of these times as the most heinous environmental vandals for failing to protect our environment and for failing to respond to climate change in a prompt and meaningful manner.
