

Australia is an Island continent surrounded by oceans that are the envy of the world. The oceans are one of our most important natural resources. Given that these natural resources and our marine life are already under pressure, the current balance of marine sanctuary networks, which are strategically placed in different climate zones, will do much to alleviate these pressures. The existing marine sanctuaries are vital to ensure a long term healthy future for our marine life and our marine nation. Do not change the current balance.

regards, Barry Morris

Dr Barry Morris,

Conjoint Senior Lecturer,

Sociology and Anthropology,

Newcastle University, Australia

Honorary Associate, Anthropology,

Sydney University, Australia

Protests, Land Rights and Riots

<http://www.berghahnbooks.com/title.php?rowtag=MorrisProtests>

<http://aiatsis.gov.au/publications/products/protest-land-rights-and-riots-postcolonial-struggles-australia-1980s/paperback>