

I cannot believe that a 21st century Australian Government would even consider winding back the great progress that has been made.

As we move into a world with ever increasing population, with more and more unpredictable weather events, it is hugely important that we step-up our protection of the environment of our oceans.

PLEASE look beyond the short-term financial gains for the few and embrace the long-term environmental gains for the many - if anything, we should be increasing the size of our Marine National Parks.
