

The earth's oceans are in grave danger due to human exploitation and illegal fishing activities. It is imperative for governments of nations blessed with a long coastline to actively monitor and regulate the way they are used so that the long term viability of the myriad creatures to which it is home. The plagues of over-fishing, plastic dumping, chemical pollution and human recreational activities is an ongoing and increasing threat that needs to be actively controlled and regulated.

We entreat the Australian government to take this matter with the utmost seriousness and take a proactive role in protecting our vast coastline and the surrounding ocean.

Bhaskaran R Krishnan