

I am fearful that the winding back of our national protection of Marine National Parks is a retrograde step. It seems at first sight that the widening of areas for commercial fisheries could be of benefit to that particular industry, however in the long term it would be an ecological, environmental and commercial disaster. It is through protection that we can ensure our future fisheries, commercial fishing and marine environments.

Please reconsider this legislation.

Margaret Thorpe.