

Dear Tony,

In a world where marine animals are under increasing threat of extinction by humans, we need Australians to hold firm on their commitment to protect our oceans. As long as we allow them oil and coal companies will push to increase profits without a care for their effect on the environment. Only when they can't access or traverse our oceans will they pursue more expensive but safer options. Please retain the existing marine parks so that our grand children will have a planet where they can still see marine life and the beautiful Australian oceans.

Kind Regards

Cathy Burns
