

To the Minister for Environment, or whom it may concern,

The waters around Australia are some of the most diverse on the planet and to open them to commercial fishing is to allow the destruction of some of the most valuable areas of biodiversity.

As government, you have a responsibility to protect these areas for future generations, not the right to rape and pillage for a few extra dollars.

So please, for the sake of the global population, and those who will come after us, don't cut the marine sanctuaries. They are far too valuable to be treated as mere commodities.

Regards,

Deborah Booth

Sent from my iPhone