

Please do not go backwards in terms of conservation. Your grandchildren will want to see the oceans as you have , clean and full of magical life.
There has to be an end point to the over use of resources.

Halving the Marine Parks and reintroducing trawling is a recipe for disaster.
It may produce a few jobs in the short term, may make a few big mining and fishing corporations happy for a while, but the detrimental effects can never be reversed. Extinctions are permanent, and when the fish are gone, they are gone for good.
Fish farms can only produce more environmental disasters as can be seen be the filthy salmon farming industry.

The oceans need Australia's protection, not further plundering.
The wonders of the oceans can never be replaced and we should be acting to minimise the impacts of industry and other countries' industries, not going in for the kill ourselves.

Please reconsider this disastrous plan and its dire consequences.
