

Based on over half a century of observing how our marine environment has come under more and more pressure from those seeking a quick profit, and also having been privileged to witness the natural wonders of some of the ocean areas now being proposed to be excluded from existing reserves, I cannot believe that there is wisdom in reducing the existing reserves. To do so would simply be too dangerous to their long term sustainability and health. Please do not reduce these existing reserves.

David Allan
Sent from my iPad