

To whom it may concern

The impact of human activity on this planet has been devastating for many species including ourselves. While technology has been mind blowing we are outsmarting ourselves as a race. Wealth and disadvantage are among many key factors when trying to right wrongs especially where our environment is concerned.

Someone is obviously going to gain from this incredible short sighted move to reduce what many people fought to gain previously. We do not do enough to protect our oceans and its inhabitants. The decision makers obviously do not care for their grandchildren and great grandchildren's future and what we leave behind, but many of us do.

Start making a long term difference buy defending our oceans. Securing food sources by other methods after all you have the wealth and technology to do this.

Yours sincerely

Dianne Ingrey

Sent from my iPad