

Why is this government winding back the protection of our oceans and allowing greater potential destruction of reefs and fish populations? What shortsightedness, what mindless arrogance, what on earth are they thinking?

The time to protect and preserve our environment on land and in the sea is now, there is no justifiable reason for going in the opposite direction and in the process holding up Australia as an example of how not to look after our natural gifts. The planet, and the people (read 'voters'), cannot tolerate any more of this. Change it back. Look after our natural heritage, don't destroy it in the name of jobs or the economy; there won't be either of those if the fish are gone and the oceans polluted and sterilized.

Remember, there are no votes in it.

Thank you for reading,

Greg Mason.