

It is difficult to comprehend why the current Australian Government does not understand the need to conserve our sanctuaries for fish and animals in the seas surrounding our country by winding back ocean protections.

On top of the government's inability to understand that global warming is real and their inability to set a clean energy target for Australia, one can only believe that our politicians are not interested in what the majority of Australians want, they are only interested in sucking up to their business mates and are willing to sacrifice everything we hold dear in this country just to keep the money flowing in from their mates to keep themselves in power.

Why would the general public want to keep this current crop of politicians in power? They must think we are as crazy as they are

This will not be forgotten in 2018 when the ballot boxes are opened and counted. The coalition has no chance of being re-elected in 2018 and I would hazard a guess that the coalition will not see the Treasury benches again for a long, long time.

Can't wait for 2018.

Bruce Paul